Dear Friends of The Salvation Army,

As we look back over the past two years, we remember moments of sickness, hardship, inequality, and suffering. But we also remember moments when people, just like you, stepped forward in dark times to provide hope and help for struggling neighbors.

Our dedicated volunteers, staff, and officers are committed to serving in our local communities as an expression of God’s unconditional love. Our mission is to help anyone who walks through our doors. When we couldn’t physically open our doors at the height of the pandemic, we modified the ways we typically serve New Yorkers to ensure our services would continue. We even saw an increase in demand for our services at times of 300%.

My wife, Sandra, and I pray that as you flip through this report, you will be inspired by the powerful stories of hope, examples of excellent service, and the incredible impact you have and will continue to have for New Yorkers who are in need.

We pray God’s richest blessing on you and your family, for continued health, and encouragement. We are so proud to call you a friend of The Salvation Army and those that we serve.

Sincerely,

Raphael Jackson

The Salvation Army Greater New York Divisional Leaders
The Salvation Army was founded by ministers William and Catherine Booth in England in 1865 and arrived in the United States in 1880 through Battery Park in New York City. Nationally, The Salvation Army operates more than 7,600 centers and helps more than 30 million people each year.

In our 2021 fiscal year, The Salvation Army aimed to uplift New Yorkers through:

- 38 Community and Worship Centers
- 8 Developmental Disabilities Services (DDS) Homes
- 3 Centers for Substance Abuse Rehabilitation
- 3 Shelters for Unhoused Individuals and Families
- 4,324,694 Meals
- 208,050 Nights of Shelter
- 186,174 Volunteer Hours

The Salvation Army was selected by the CARES Act to distribute funds to help pay back-rent to landlords, preventing families from being evicted. The Salvation Army maintained a special fund to help those struggling to pay utility bills, ensuring nobody needed to choose between paying their electric bill or buying groceries.

To care for the needs of children, The Salvation Army quickly shifted our music and creative arts programs to online classes, and without the limitations of physical meetings spaces, expanded to include even more young New Yorkers. This ensured continued education and socialization with mentors and peers.

After the successful pivot in Summer 2020 to Camp-In-A-Box, where we delivered arts, crafts, and snacks to the homes of 1,171 children for a virtual summer camp, The Salvation Army knew that we needed to provide children with as much normalcy as possible in 2021. The Salvation Army converted our summer sleep-away camp into a day camp, ensuring the children were able to explore nature and build lasting friendships even though they could not sleep in congregate bunks.

From the start of the COVID-19 pandemic in March of 2020 through the surges brought on by the Delta and Omicron variants, The Salvation Army remained active and committed to serving New Yorkers in their most unexpected circumstances. The Salvation Army’s immediate response to COVID-19 in March of 2020 was to identify reliable food supply chains and mobilize to expand emergency food programs. After more than doubling the number of meals we served in the Greater New York area to 7.4 million in the first year of the pandemic, the demand for groceries and hot meals did not subside. With the increase in street homelessness, our 18 soup kitchens throughout the region remained busier than ever.

Covid-19 Impact: American Business Awards

The Salvation Army of Greater New York received the Grand Stevie Award and two Gold Stevie Awards from the 2021 American Business Awards in the categories of Most Valuable Nonprofit Response to COVID-19 and Delivery Hero of the Year.

These awards recognized the amazing work of our emergency response teams and volunteers throughout the height of the pandemic as they met the increased needs that our communities were experiencing. One judge remarked, “The Salvation Army of Greater New York has shown how important their organization and mission is during the pandemic and the set of examples provided in this nomination are easily reason enough to nominate the organization and further validation of why the organization is so needed.”
"When this all started to happen, we contacted the local school district and began delivering breakfast and lunches to families that couldn’t get to one of the locations where they were distributing food.

We started delivering 40 meals daily and that quickly increased to over 200 meals that children would normally count on getting while at school. Some families asked for even more help with groceries, so we started delivering food boxes to those homes on a regular basis.

We’re happy to serve in the ways that we do to fulfill the unmet needs that our neighbors are experiencing. We’re here to help, and we’ll do it in any way we can.”

EVERYBODY IS GIVING!
Every year, natural disasters devastate thousands of individuals and families. While the destruction often takes only minutes, the result is a long-term struggle for many survivors, first responders, and the communities affected.

The Salvation Army of Greater New York takes great pride in its history of disaster response work - notably following the September 11th terrorist attacks in 2001, Superstorm Sandy in 2012, and more localized disasters like fires, gas explosions, and water main breaks.

Most recently, our Emergency Services team went into action to ensure COVID-19 did not impact our community food programs, served with The Salvation Army in the western United States in our wildfire relief efforts, and helped those impacted by Hurricane Ida through immediate assistance and long-term recovery.
Our Emergency Services team focuses not only on disaster response and recovery but also on mitigation and preparedness. To ensure long-term recovery, we work with affected families, teach disaster preparedness workshops, and provide direct financial assistance where needed. We also battle the everyday disaster that some New Yorkers are facing with our homelessness outreach and partnerships with other New York City non-profit organizations working in the prevention of homelessness.
The Salvation Army operates three government-funded residences for New Yorkers experiencing homelessness, including two shelters for families with children in Queens and a shelter for men with substance abuse and mental health diagnoses in Brooklyn.

Aside from offering shelter through our residences, The Salvation Army seeks to alleviate homelessness through its services offered at 38 community centers across the Greater New York area.

Tackling homelessness is a huge undertaking, and not one that can be accomplished by any single group or agency. That’s why The Salvation Army is humbled to be part of Rescue Alliance NYC, a coalition of faith-based organizations who are determined to uplift New Yorkers experiencing homelessness by proving resources, case management, clean and safe shelter, and a pathway to stability.

Each year, this coalition organizes a winter outreach event where volunteers walk the streets of Manhattan to offer those experiencing homelessness an invitation for a hot sit-down meal, access to wrap-around services, and overnight hospitality.

It is suspected that 4,000 New Yorkers sleep on the streets of the city every evening, a number expected to be much higher as a result of the economic impacts of COVID-19.
We know the holidays can be especially hard for some New Yorkers, so each of our community centers host special Thanksgiving and Christmas meals for our homeless neighbors, often accompanied by cold-weather clothing care packages. For people with homes, the community centers provide turkeys and all the fixings so that families can enjoy a festive meal together. These basic services are essential to those who can’t afford to put food on the table or who don’t have access to hot meals while they are living on the streets.

FOOD INSECURITY

One of the most pressing questions facing struggling New Yorkers each day is where their next meal will come from. This is true for both those experiencing homelessness and for those who are just trying to make ends meet. Each of The Salvation Army’s 38 community centers in the Greater New York area provide essential food pantries to the community, with 18 centers also operating regular soup kitchens to serve hot meals.
“Our soup kitchen guests are so gracious - they are so thankful to get a hot meal and a friendly hello. It really touches my heart and feels so good to be a part of making a difference. Even if it’s just lunch for an hour, we’re going to treat our guests like customers at the best restaurant in the city.”
Many of our centers provide regularly scheduled activities for seniors, including arts and crafts, special events, socialization, and games. Our location in Bensonhurst, Brooklyn provides a vibrant and active outlet for neighborhood seniors in the form of dance, Tai Chi, Chinese Opera, ESL classes, computer literacy, table tennis, and much more. Other opportunities through which we support our senior population include camp retreats and regular visits to extended care facilities. The Salvation Army is a safe haven for our senior population, just as it is for people of all ages who are in need.
Developmental Disabilities Services

The Salvation Army operates 8 Developmental Disabilities Services (DDS) Homes in the Bronx, Queens, and Brooklyn, offering a sense of family in a supervised environment by professionally trained staff. Residents are provided with development in:

- Independent Living Skills
- Physical, Speech, and Occupational Therapy
- Physiotherapy
- Nutritional Services
- Recreation and Socialization
- Community Inclusion and Life Experiences

Because we operate these homes across three boroughs, it’s easy for family members to make regular visits and support their loved ones who are living at The Salvation Army.
HIV HEALTH HOME SERVICES

In response to the HIV/AIDS pandemic in the 1980s, The Salvation Army opened its center for HIV Services in the Bronx. An intensive medical case management and care coordination program, the center meets the very specific needs of New Yorkers suffering from HIV/AIDS.

In 2012, under the Health Home umbrella of care in New York City, the eligibility for services was expanded to include many chronic illnesses including HIV, diabetes, asthma, hypertension, obesity, substance abuse, and mental health disorders. Now HIV Health Home Services, the center focuses on helping disenfranchised individuals and families in the community to work towards stability and improved health. Through advocacy and referrals, we help resolve many issues related to health, housing, and benefits. This work with our clients helps each person develop independence in managing their needs.

The services include advocacy and referrals to:

- Mental health services
- Substance abuse services
- Support and education groups
- Nutrition education
- Legal assistance
- Housing assistance
- Financial counseling
- Emergency food and travel assistance
Once a month, this outreach mobilizes to visit these women, offering them an uplifting gift such as lip gloss, nail polish or jewelry. Along with the gift, they are given a card with local information on free lunch programs, ESL classes, affordable childcare, and how to reach out for assistance 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

We believe liberation is within their reach and we hope to become a trusted friend walking alongside them on their journey towards freedom.

Most recently, the FBI New York office reached out to The Salvation Army for assistance with emergency housing for trafficking survivors, noting the extreme difficulty in placing adult female-identifying survivors in emergency housing. This is the first step in transitioning from a life of exploitation to one of self-sufficiency and freedom in a clean, trauma-informed safe space.

The Salvation Army provides a secure place for survivors to live for up to 7 days while working with their social worker and service providers to locate stable, permanent housing and the resources for women to fully exit from their situation. The program has the capacity to house and serve 156 women over the course of one year.
The Salvation Army operates three adult rehabilitation centers in Poughkeepsie, Manhattan, and Hempstead. The 180-day residential programs provide spiritual, social, and emotional assistance for those needing to break the bondage of substance abuse and dependency.

Thanks to generous donations of clothing, furniture, and other household items, the proceeds of sales at our thrift stores go directly to funding our rehabilitation programs. When shoppers visit our stores, they are both finding a less expensive retail alternative and impacting lives in a powerful way.

The benefits of our thrift stores are extended to those seeking assistance at our community centers as well, where we provide clothing and furniture vouchers as a way to purchase items that an individual or family may desperately need for their home.
The Salvation Army fully funds its substance abuse rehabilitation centers through thrift store sales. Participants in our rehabilitation centers receive housing, food, and rehabilitation for the duration of their stay with no income or insurance requirements.

“I continued to go in and out of hospitals for depression, alcoholism, and suicide. During my last stay, someone recommended The Salvation Army’s rehabilitation center, and that all I needed to do was show up.

Through volunteering, Bible study, group and individual counseling, and work opportunities, I learned that I wasn’t alone and that change is possible through the power of the Holy Spirit.

I found my calling, which is to serve others, and I try to be a beacon of light for people in the same way that The Salvation Army was for me.”

The Salvation Army of Greater New York works with thousands of children who are at risk through our music and arts programs, childcare centers, after-school programs, and summer camp. Children are provided with the resources they need to set them on a pathway to a successful and enriching future.
Music and Arts

We believe music and arts instruction instills valuable life-long lessons for young New Yorkers. Exposure to music and the arts is proven to increase self-esteem, build language and social skills, and strengthen academics. Most of our 38 community centers offer instruction in music theory, instruments, dance, and theater. The Salvation Army is the largest provider of music and arts education outside the public school system and has maintained its passion and commitment to these free education programs.
CHILD CARE

The Salvation Army offers free childcare for children ages 2 to 5 through our five licensed childcare centers in Brooklyn, the Bronx, and Queens.

We strive to create an environment where children can learn how to become critical thinkers and are given opportunities to participate in the arts, educational exercises, and field trips. The purpose of these activities is to teach colors, shapes, letters, numbers, and to share new and exciting hands-on learning experiences. Children are encouraged to explore the world around them, develop their independence, and expand their imagination.

AFTER-SCHOOL

Our community centers are a safe place for neighborhood children, offering a nurturing and structured environment. Children benefit from homework assistance, character building activities, tutoring, and hot meals. In Brooklyn and Harlem, we operate a New York City Department of Education program, Greater Academic Incentive to Nurture Success (GAINS), in some of the most vulnerable communities. GAINS programs provide children with additional educational opportunities in STEM, English, and the arts. Families of children in any of our after-school enrichment programs have easy access to other wrap-around services, like food pantries, financial assistance, and other social services.
Star Lake Camp and Conference Center

Each summer we host over 1,000 young New Yorkers ages 7-14 at our 400-acre sleepaway camp in New Jersey, which has been in operation since 1923. Campers enjoy many activities like hiking, swimming, arts and crafts, archery, sports, and much more. Woven into their daily activities are life-skills practices and team building programs to prepare them for the challenges they may face in their development. In 2021, we were able to maintain safe outdoor opportunities for children by transporting campers from our 38 community centers each day, rather than campers sleeping in congregate accommodations on the camp grounds.

Several times a year the camp hosts seniors from our centers for retreats, an opportunity for an often-isolated age group to experience a getaway, spend time with others, and take advantage of hiking trails, paddle boats, mini golf, and shuffleboard courts.

The Camp and Conference Center offers an array of rental opportunities for television and film shoots, church groups, and corporate retreats.
“Star Lake Camp is a place where you can be yourself and make friends. They teach you things there you haven’t learned back at home. What I like the most is when we go on hikes and do activities like play soccer and relay races. I enjoy myself there, and meeting people, especially my counselors who support me and help me if I struggle with something.”
The holiday season is a special time for many individuals and families, but some have difficulty putting food on the table for a Thanksgiving meal or can’t afford to fulfill their children’s wishes for Christmas. In 2021, The Salvation Army in the greater New York area provided over 25,000 Thanksgiving meals through our food pantries and soup kitchens, distributed over 4,400 turkeys, and over 40,000 toys as part of our Angel Tree program.

When a family must choose between paying rent or having a festive meal on Thanksgiving, or between keeping the lights on and putting toys under the Christmas tree, The Salvation Army is committed to making sure the holidays are special for New Yorkers.
In 1891, Captain Joseph McFee of The Salvation Army was motivated to respond to the hunger many people in San Francisco were experiencing. To feed more than 1,000 of the city’s poorest individuals on Christmas Day, Captain McFee placed a large soup pot at the Oakland Ferry Landing with a sign that read, “Keep the Pot Boiling.” Generous people passing by quickly filled the pot with donations for the meal, and The Salvation Army’s iconic Red Kettle was born.

The kettle spread from the west coast to the east coast and the combined effort nationwide resulted in 150,000 Christmas dinners for those in need. In 1901, kettle contributions in New York City provided funds for the first-ever sit-down dinner in Madison Square Garden, a tradition that continued for many years.

In order to bring awareness to the tremendous needs of New Yorkers in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic, The Salvation Army unveiled its 32’ tall Giant Red Kettle, the largest in the world, in December of 2020. The tradition continued for the second year in December of 2021 as the kettle moved through Times Square, Astor Place, Macy’s Herald Square, Union Square, and Albee Plaza in Brooklyn.
Contributions to The Salvation Army’s red kettles enable the organization to continue its year-round efforts to help those in need right in local communities. Today in the United States, The Salvation Army helps more than 4.5 million people during the holiday months.
I would not have had a Thanksgiving or Christmas growing up without The Salvation Army. They always provide a safe space. The Salvation Army poured into me when I was a child and now I can pour into these children. We thank The Salvation Army for their partnership, and for all the good work they do on behalf of New Yorkers.”
Echelon is the emerging professionals arm of The Salvation Army. Its mission is to mobilize the next generation for The Salvation Army by providing opportunities for young adults to engage with the organization through fellowship, fundraising, and volunteering. Our community is serious about having fun while addressing some of today’s most pressing issues within our local communities.

Echelon members participate in a variety of activities that directly support Salvation Army services within the chapter’s local community. Whether we are serving, attending one of our social events, or raising money, you will find Echelon is a connected community full of people making a difference.

Members have the opportunity to take on leadership roles within Echelon, creating and driving strategy while gaining valuable experience. Members can meet other like-minded young professionals by networking at social events held throughout the year, as well as meeting and working with senior Advisory Board members.
JOIN OUR FIGHT FOR GOOD

We are committed to providing the support systems and resources our communities so desperately need. We rebuild broken lives by offering strength for today and hope for tomorrow.

We cannot do it alone.
